Billy Ah, there you are, greetings and welcome, my friend

Ptaah Greetings to you too, Eduard, dear friend. It simply leaves me no peace, what that part of the responsible Irish specialists – what they want to be, but are not – is spreading with big and important words concerning the Corona disease as important information, although they have only little knowledge and do not know the real facts of the whole thing. This, while the other part, which really tries to get the whole facts and connections and recognizes and correctly assesses them, as well as the precarious situation, does not want to be heard or its findings and insights are not taken seriously. This is not only the case in the medical, virological, epidemiological and other disease-experienced professional circles, but also in the heads of state and authorities and health organizations, etc., where the word is spoken by those who, in their ignorance and lack of knowledge, addictedly emphasize themselves. This while those who have gained good knowledge and expertise are not listened to, or they are imposed silence and forbidden to speak out their expertise.

It is simply alarming how unreasonable many earthly people are, because one of my foresights reveals more and more disaster that will be conjured up in the coming times by the ignorance and unreasonableness of about a quarter of the earthly humanity. Although this quarter corresponds to a minority of the entire mass of the earthly overpopulation, this minority is fully prepared to use violence, which is already evident in the United States and will soon be evident in Europe as well. The corona epidemic pandemic and the conspiracy theories arising from it, as well as the enactment of necessary protective measures against the epidemic, are already being used as justification for right-wing demonstrations and acts of violence in a few days. Right-wing extremists, <rich citizens> and conspiracy theorists will come together and incite the large masses of the unpermitted and stupid of those participating in demonstrations and seduce them into shameful acts.

Billy It will probably not be possible to change this if you say that you already know this from a future view. But even that part of the virologists is no better, who pretend to be well, but do not recognize what is really going on.

Ptaah Many virologists, medical professionals, epidemiologists, etc. are incapable of recognizing that the corona disease virus is constantly changing in its mode of action, as well as that it is beginning to spread in a new variation to younger ages under 40 and to adolescents and children and already has various characteristics that are still absolutely unknown to all terrestrial corona researchers.

As I already told you on August 5th, the number of people infected with corona disease will exceed 27 million by the end of this month, but due to a miscalculation, this will not be officially known until 7 days later. However, by the end of September next month, the number of people infected with Corona will increase much further and officially exceed 32 million, while the number of fatalities will also increase dramatically and will also quickly and far exceed the first million before the end of September next month.
So I repeat that it will now be, as I have said, that the corona disease death toll will increase in a few weeks to such an extent that worldwide, in just a few weeks, a number of over one million victims will have been reached, which will be by the end of the following month of September. And as I also explained earlier, the corona epidemic is now claiming tens of thousands of infected people and deaths in all countries of Europe, but especially India, Brazil and all other countries of the world are increasingly affected. This, because now the spreading wave is rising to its full size, spread and strength worldwide, still as a 1st wave, although it is still not understood that it is not a 2nd wave, which can be pending at a later time. But from now on the recklessness of those responsible for the state will take revenge, who on the one hand ordered a halfway effective lockdown and then irresponsibly lifted it again after a largely useless execution due to commercial pressure, economic desire and various other shortcomings as well as due to population quarrels.

What has happened so far all over the world regarding the corona epidemic was only the beginning of the whole thing, because now the corona wave, which already started last year, is really rolling off and rises to its peak and will continue to roll until it has largely run its course, but this will not be the final end, because at least its danger will continue to exist. Even countries where it is assumed that they have survived the worst will again be affected by the epidemic, which will again lead to many deaths. In addition, even after it has subsided, and even years and decades later, the disease can continue to claim infected persons and fatalities, on the one hand directly by the corona disease, which can break out again and again, even in convalesced corona patients, but on the other hand also by other diseases, which can cause completely different corona-induced diseases as a result of corona influences. All this, as elsewhere in the future also women who have recovered from the corona disease can experience serious health problems and birth impairments during pregnancy. According to our research findings, under certain circumstances, genetically inheritable damage and changes are to be feared, as well as impairments of neuralgic factors and of the consciousness of the patient.

The brain, in general the organs and their function as well as the coordinative abilities resp. the general ability to organize different single tasks and activities in a complex field of activity and to cope with them in such a way that they fit together in a meaningful and purposeful way, can be evaluated and applied in a coordinated way. However, it will take a long time for the medical sciences of terrestrial mankind to recognize, grasp and understand all these facts, and not only months and years, but possibly many decades, or even into the time of the next centuries. In total, the number of corona epidemics and corona deaths will exceed all previous figures within the next few weeks. And still – in spite of contrary claims of unreliable, in their ignorance and ignorance with the untruth and with unrealistic explanations of wanting to make themselves big <experts> – the beginning wave resp. the 1st wave of the corona epidemic is still predominant, which is now worldwide only in full strength up, down and up again, spreading and swelling down again, but this will last for a long time. This means, however, that even after the peak the danger of the corona epidemic will not be averted, because even after the epidemic has subsided it will remain active and will claim many more infected persons and victims over time, as I have fathomed in advance. Consequently, all necessary preventive and protective measures should continue to be taken, against all other reckless state and official false declarations and measures, as well as against the dangerous lies and trivialization of the epidemic by stupid know-it-alls, as well as negating mindless and irrational people, who are not able to grasp the danger, as well as the intelligent conspiracy theorists and their believers, etc.
The Corona Plague will therefore continue to claim, and for the time being strongly increasing, very many and soon over a million human lives, as a result of the stupidity, unreasonableness and incapacity of the stupid and incapable as well as autocratic state officials, as well as that part of the equally stupid population that will not fit into the security precautions, as the herbal priest complained about in 1918 regarding the <Spanish flu>, whom you met in 1944 together with my father Sfath.

Note: Source Wikipedia: Johann Künzle (* September 3, 1857 in Hinterespen near St. Gallen; † January 9, 1945 in Zizers) was a Swiss Catholic priest and publicist. Along with Sebastian Kneipp, he is probably the best-known herbal priest and a promoter of alternative medicine and herbal medicine.

Johann Künzle’s parents owned a farm, the father also worked as a trained gardener. After school in St. Gallen and the Einsiedeln monastery, Künzle studied theology and philosophy at the University of Leuven (Belgium) from 1877 and was ordained a priest at the St. Georgen seminary (St. Gallen) in 1881. Afterwards he was active as a pastor in various parishes in Eastern Switzerland, from 1896 to 1907 in Buchs in the Rhine Valley, until 1909 in Herisau and then until 1920 in Wangs near Sargans. During the Kulturkampf of 1884, Künzle was active in the fight against the abolition of Catholic schools and institutions in Switzerland and Vorarlberg. In 1913 he promoted spa tourism in Wangs (near Bad Ragaz) and founded a herb market. Since it was attributed to his efforts that in 1918, when the Spanish flu raged worldwide, not a single person in the community died, he was granted honorary citizenship. Due to his sometimes dubious medical views, e.g. regarding the cure of diabetes, he was forcibly transferred by his bishop to Zizers in Graubünden in 1920. In 1922, he passed an examination before a medical college in order to be allowed to run a ‘poison-free medicinal herb practice’. He also started a herbal trade and gave lectures on the use of herbal medicine. The Kräuterpfarrer Künzle AG was founded in 1939. In 1954 it moved to Minusio (near Locarno) and was converted into a foundation in 1980.

Künzle was the editor of popular folk calendars, the monthly magazine ‘Salvia’ (for ‘poison-free herbal medicine’), author of the ‘Großes Kräuterheilbuch’ (1944, later edited and re-published by Rudolf Fritz Weiss, among others) and many other publications. The book ‘Chrut und Uchrut’ was translated into several languages after its first publication in 1911 and is still being published today.

In Zizers he worked successfully as an entrepreneur and publicist until the end of his life – but always in the service of the Catholic Church.

In Wangs you can walk along the ‘Pfarrer Künzle Weg’, which was built and inscribed by the Pfarrer-Künzle-Verein. There is also a grotto on the way, which Künzle built with students and other residents of the community.

As for the Corona epidemic and the behavior of government officials and sections of the population in this regard, since the beginning of the epidemic there has been an unparalleled irresponsibility of government officials and a large part of the population. As a result of their incapacity – which I must emphasize again and again – the powers that be have not taken the necessary measures from the very beginning of the epidemic to contain and prevent the pandemic. This is not only because they are unable to lead in every respect and have no ability to do so, but first of all because they are not able to assess and understand a situation in a consequent or logical way due to their lack of intelligence. But this lack of intelligence also prevents them from creating the ability to be foresighted and to be able to make the right decisions and to act rationally, so that they are completely unable to work out right behaviors in a crisis situation, as it is currently the case with the corona-plague, to prescribe them and to enforce them and have them enforced by the whole population.

So far, neither mandatory total activity blockades nor other correct and functioning safety measures have been issued for a necessary period of time, which could have nipped the epidemic in the bud within two to three months. Therefore, in the coming weeks and months, the entire population of many countries will continue to face disastrous times, because they will again be strongly affected by the disease. For this however clearly recognizably with the majority of the state responsible persons, as with the majority of the populations, the necessary intelligence was not sufficient. And this has remained so since the beginning of the Corona epidemic up to the present day, and it will remain so as a result of the widely prevailing ignorance and unreasonableness of the majority of those responsible for the state and the majority of the populations acting in the same way. But in the time now to come this will bring much suffering as well as disaster to humanity on earth and claim many lives. Therefore the course of the Corona epidemic will be protracted and the first wave will weaken only after a longer period of time. Only now will it reach its climax in a billowing up and down manner, which, however, will only be reached in a longer series of weeks and will claim deaths in excess of the first million. And this time the whole of Europe will be strongly affected by this, because now the stupidity of those responsible for the state will take revenge for recklessly opening the lockdown instead of carrying out the necessary deep blockade, which would have led not only to the containment but to the complete end of the epidemic. Other false assertions, which will come up again and again, that the expected 2nd wave is already raging, correspond to a stupidity unlike any other, which leads to false hopes and to the fact that the security precautions against the epidemic are even more generally neglected, whereby as a result of this false assertion the still running 1st wave can spread rapidly further and will still claim many thousands of victims in the next months. The whole unreasonableness of the majority of the leaders and the population will not lead to the fact that everyone will become understanding, because on both sides all are equally irresponsible. The health of the people will therefore continue to be endangered by the epidemic, and under certain circumstances the whole thing can drag on for the next 18 to 24 months and will continue to claim many lives. There is already a risk that a permanent global pandemic could develop out of the whole, and continue for years, if all the necessary measures to end the worldwide epidemic are not taken.

Billy Beautiful prospects. In Persia, more than 250 specialists have already died as a result of the corona virus, just as the number of <rich citizens> in Germany has increased enormously, without the security services knowing how many there really are. But regarding the Corona epidemic it is probably pointless to talk about it further, because reason and Reason is in short supply for the majority of those in power and at least for 25-30 % of the population. The sufferings are all those people who earnestly strive for the protective measures and behave correctly and responsibly, because their intelligence is up to date and they are therefore intelligent, whereas the intelligence is missing in all ricochets and believers of the conspiracy theorists, and consequently they are not able to think for themselves and are consequently addicted to stupidity.
Billy Just so. But now I would like to bury this topic and talk about what Darwin announced, namely that all life originated from a single cell or microorganism and developed into all that exists. Sfath taught me, however, also by letting me see the whole of truth on a world developing the first basic life through his research technique and by letting me learn that not only one single organism of a genus or species is the origin of the enormous diversity of all life on a planet. On earth, too, life in its millions did not develop from a single tiny cell, but, as Sfath taught me and proved to me, a wide variety of virion particles, as they are actually called, only came into existence in masses while they were still outside a cell. Only then, Sfath taught, when a virion particle can infect a host cell, should it be called \texttt{Vire} or \texttt{Virus}. I will mention this once in such a way, whereby I will first mention in relation to the \texttt{virion} what you also explained before. The single virion is nothing else than a single small and highly infectious particle, which is called virus, is lifeless and therefore does not correspond to any form of life, so it has no metabolism. Depending on the type, the virus consists of a certain nucleic acid, which is surrounded by a capsid or protein envelope. A virus has no protective shell or cell membrane, and it lacks some kind of plasma, the name of which I do not remember.

Ptaah It is a cytoplasm that has a liquid-filled reaction space for metabolic processes inside a cell, so viruses, as you mentioned, do not have a cell membrane as selective entrance and exit for dissolved substances. Furthermore, viruses do not have ribosomes, so they cannot produce proteins, just as they cannot produce .

Billy Thank you, now I remember. It is the ribosomes that the viruses lack and therefore they cannot generate proteins, because they also do not have mitochondria, which produce the energy and forces that the ribosomes need to produce proteins. Furthermore, viruses cannot reproduce themselves, because they can only do so if they have cells from another living being at their disposal that they can infect, which they do as soon as they have infected a host cell. This host cell is then quickly transformed into a mass conversion cell and forced to start a rapid reproduction of the virus and to produce new virus particles in an unstoppable way. Then – please correct me if I should say something wrong – humans, animals, plants, fungi and microorganisms consisting of only a single cell can serve as hosts for viruses. However, most viruses specifically infect only certain cell types. But what viruses consist of at all, that is probably not known to the normal citizens of the earth, which is why perhaps something should be said about it another time and again, just what these things causing various illnesses are all about, just those in which it is actually the case, while nothing needs to be said about the others, which cause good things.

Ptaah So another time and repeatedly the following is to be explained: Viruses do not consist of one or more cells, because as non-living beings they have no cells at all. Viruses are infectious organic structures, and these spread outside of cells as virions, and this is done by infecting cells, but this is only possible inside of host cells suitable for the viruses. The main purpose of viruses is to spread by infecting fresh host cells. Viruses as nucleic acids are surrounded by a protein envelope, which contains, among other things, the information for controlling the metabolism of a host cell, as well as the genetic material and the information for replication of the viral nucleic acid and for the production of a new virion.
When cells are attacked by viruses, they can no longer perform their normal tasks as production sites of constantly newly emerging viruses. In addition, many cells are destroyed when viruses are released, and symptoms of disease become apparent in the organism when the cells are infected by viruses and they begin to act.

The viruses carry certain molecules on their envelope that help them to bind to and infect cells. Once the viruses have entered cells, the envelope dissolves and the genetic material enters the cytoplasm of the cells. The nucleic acid is introduced into the cell nuclei and incorporated into the DNA of the host cells. The replication, transcription and translation of the incorporated DNA is performed by the corresponding structures of the host cells. And because the nucleic acid of the viruses contains all the necessary information for the construction of new virions, the host cells automatically produce new virus particles, which are released from the cell and infect further cells, thus starting a constantly new cycle.

The main effect of a virion or a virus particle is to spread and thus infect fresh host cells. A virion does not correspond to any form of life and therefore cannot be killed. Depending on the type of virus, it merely consists of certain nucleic acids surrounded by a protein envelope, whereby the type of virus determines its nucleic acid, which can be given as deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) or ribonucleic acid (RNA). Each type of nucleic acid, however, contains, in addition to its own information, also information that serves to control the metabolism of the host cell it affects, so that it is aligned with the virus information and causes disease and disaster. In addition to this, a virus is equipped in such a way that, because it contains a corresponding genetic material, it contains information for the replication of its own viral nucleic acid, thus making it capable of producing a new virion and, consequently, it can multiply and spread further until there is a possibility of stopping it, which, however, is only possible through appropriate medication and a corresponding combat and defense reaction of the infected cell.

Many common infectious diseases are caused by viruses. Viruses attack the cells of living beings and use them as hosts, in which they first duplicate themselves with the help of the cell and consequently only in this way new viruses can be produced. Usually, viruses destroy the cells and if this happens in a body, it can lead to long lasting diseases and dangerous epidemics and even death. This is of no importance for the viruses, because as non-living beings they continue to exist by multiplying themselves as a result of the duplication by the host cell, and this for as long as they can infect further host cells in time to ensure their own continued existence.

On the envelope of the virion, certain molecules arrange themselves, enabling it to bind to cells, after which the interaction leads to the absorption of the virion into the cell. Once this has taken place, the envelope or capsid dissolves, after which the genetic material DNA or RNA enters the cytoplasm of the cell. In this way, the nucleic acid penetrates into the cell nucleus and the DNA is incorporated into the host cell. Afterwards the replication, transcription and translation of the incorporated DNA takes place through the corresponding structures of the host cell. And because the nucleic acid of the virus contains all necessary information for the new production of virions, new virus particles are automatically produced by the host cell. Consequently, these new virions are then released from the cell, which leads to the cycle of unstoppable further infection of the cells. As a result, the cells can no longer perform their normal tasks and are therefore largely destroyed.
For repetition and more detailed explanation as well as for understanding the whole, I will repeat everything again as follows: Viruses, looked at closely, consist of dust-like substances and are tiny infectious particles, which, in contrast to bacteria, parasites, microorganisms and plants, animals, creatures or insects etc., are not living creatures, therefore they have no metabolism and are not able to multiply and certainly not to reproduce without the help of a foreign cell. This is because the viruses are not living beings and therefore cannot perform an act of copulation or give birth in any way, but can only multiply under the influence of the host cell.

As non-living beings, viruses have no metabolism; they lack a cytoplasm, a liquid-filled reaction space, which is existentially important for life forms and is responsible for the metabolic processes inside the cell. Viruses also lack a cell membrane as a protective shell and selective <entrance and exit> to let dissolved substances in or out. In addition, viruses do not have ribosomes or protein production, nor do they have mitochondria, which would generate energies and forces. And because the viruses themselves cannot produce proteins, they are not able to use energy for themselves and replicate.

In order to be able to replicate or multiply, viruses need cells from another living being, so-called host cells, to which they can dock and infect them. As soon as a virus has infected such a cell, it is reprogrammed, stimulated to produce and misused to multiply the virus or to produce new virus particles.

As soon as cells are attacked by a virus, they are called host cells, regardless of whether the cell attack occurs in a human or animal, in plants, fungi and even in microorganisms that consist of only a single cell. Any cell of any kind can serve as a host for viruses, but most viruses specifically infect only certain cell types.

Viruses were the actual origin of all life, which also makes it clear that the approximately 2.8 million viruses known to us Plejars on earth not only have negative, dangerous and life-destroying impacts, but also positive, benign and life-creating as well as life-supporting ones.
